

The Bronze Oak Project

Ancient trees are part of our landscape, our art and our history. The greatest collection of ancient trees in the world is in Great Britain and they only survive due to the care of the public. The Bronze Oak Project aims to create a lasting record of the most and most astonishing living trees in Britain.

Imagine the extraordinary impact of seeing a 1000 year old oak from Windsor Great Park represented publicly in bronze in a big public space in London. The project aims to create a lasting record of the most and most astonishing living trees in Britain.
